

Internet

DOMAIN NAME DISPUTE RESOLUTION

Dispute Resolution Policies Administered by National Arbitration Forum

Organizations such as the Internet Corporation of Assigned Names and Numbers (ICANN), NeuStar, and ICM Registry created and continue to sponsor official domain name dispute resolution policies including the Uniform Dispute Resolution Policy (UDRP). Similar policies and rule sets were created to govern other top-level domains (TLDs) with extensions such as .com, .name, .us or .pro.

the National Arbitration Forum. Cases follow established rules and are decided by unbiased legal experts. All cases filed with the FORUM are heard and decided by Dispute Resolution Panelists who are lawyers and judges with significant domain name dispute experience or who specialize in trademark, copyright or e-commerce law.

ABOUT US

Since 1999, the National Arbitration Forum has been the leading U.S. based provider of domain name dispute resolution services and has handled over 17,000 domain name disputes worldwide. We have more than 150 expert panelists in 36 countries and can conduct proceedings in many languages, including Chinese, Dutch, English, French, Japanese, Korean, Polish, Russian and Spanish. Founded in 1986, the FORUM is headquartered in Minneapolis.

To learn more, visit us online at <http://domain.adrforum.com>.

In 1999, ICANN selected the National Arbitration Forum (FORUM) as one of the first international dispute resolution providers. Since then, the FORUM's Domain Name Dispute Program has handled over 17,000 disputes worldwide. We offer dispute resolution for all generic top-level domains under the UDRP as well as for a variety of country-code top-level domains, such as .us, .co, and .me.

THE FORUM ADVANTAGE

The FORUM has worked with complainants and respondents from over 40 countries and handles cases in most major languages.

The UDRP and similar policies have corresponding Supplemental Rules issued by The FORUM's dispute resolution program offers significant cost and time savings to users by providing an online, streamlined case management process with quick results. We accept electronic filing of cases for fast and easy processing. Parties can also access case information online at any time. The FORUM works with all parties, including registries and registrars, to guide them through the process.

For more information about our existing programs or creating a new customizable program, please contact us at 952-516-6538 or tldprograms@adrforum.com. Our expert staff will be glad to answer your questions and discuss your unique situation.